Corporate Health Services
by Corporate Doctors Plus

Our Story

At Corporate Doctors Plus, our experienced health professionals provide a completely different approach to corporate health. We use the latest evidence-based research to provide comprehensive and tailored medical care for organisations and their workforces. We take pride in our culture of education, prevention, accuracy and credibility.

All of our clients benefit from a direct line of communication with our directors, Dr Maria Boulton and Dr Fiona Raciti, as well as access to a respiratory physician, allied health team and pathology all on-site. We have affiliates in other cities across Australia to provide quality corporate health services for your convenience.

Our Point of Difference

We understand that your employees' health is important to your business's bottom line – injured and sick employees can impact on your company significantly in terms of sick leave, loss of productivity and rising insurance premiums. Our focus is not only on the medical management of workplace injuries but also on prevention. We help employees with their overall health, fitness and emotional wellbeing, as we collaborate with employers to improve workplace health.

Why Choose Corporate Doctors Plus?

Australia Wide Network

To make it easier for employers to access corporate health services, we have affiliated with IMMEX, leaders in occupational healthcare (with two sites in Sydney - Parramatta and Waterloo), to deliver our superior services across Australia. All our affiliates share the same philosophy of high-quality corporate health services.

We currently offer corporate health services in the following cities. Based on the demand for occupational and corporate health services, we continue to grow and further develop our network of affiliates across all major and regional cities.

We are competitively priced without compromising on quality

As business owners ourselves, we understand the reality of financial budget constraints and are committed to being competitively priced. We can create a tailored health services program with set pricing to meet the needs and requirements of your unique business.

We also understand that your employee's health is important to the bottom line of your business. Injured and sick employees can impact on your company significantly either in sick leave, loss of productivity or rising insurance premiums.

Our team are dedicated to ensuring the focus is on the experienced medical management of workplace injuries as well as on the prevention of injury by helping your employees improve their overall health, fitness, emotional wellbeing and improving the culture within the workplace.

We would be honoured to provide your organisation with our schedule of services along with our current price list, specific to your needs.

No middleman, we provide direct service

Corporate Doctors Plus provides a direct service so clients won't have to deal with a middleman for any your occupational health needs, and this ensures thorough and prompt reporting back to our clients. Our handpicked team of qualified and experienced medical professionals recognises that a tailored, evidence-based approach is essential in providing cost-effective and successful treatment, wellness and return-to-work plans.

Directors, Dr Fiona Raciti and Dr Maria Boulton lead a team of empathetic, dedicated and experienced doctors, nurses, allied health professionals, specialists and a collaborative administration staff, who all contribute to providing quality occupational health services. We offer direct lines of communication to management to provide specialised, quality corporate health care services.
